
THE McIVER MONUMENT.

On Wednesday, the statue of Charles Duncan McIver, educational leader and statesman, erected in Capitol Square in Raleigh, will be unveiled with addresses and appropriate ceremonies. Addresses will be made by eloquent speakers.

To the unveiling of this statue all North Carolina is invited. No special invitations have been sent out, but a general invitation to all the people is extended. McIver's work touched every county and almost every home in the State. His name and fame are among the most valued possessions of his native State, which he loved so well and served so patriotically.
