THOUSANDS PAID TRIBUTE TO CHARLES D. M'IVER

Great Ceremony In Which The State Adds Materially To Its Art—The Memorial Is a Splendid Expression of a High Ideal.

MANY PEOPLE FROM A DISTANCE ATTENDED THE EXERCISES

The Capitol Square Was Crowded and the Exercises Were a Beautiful Ceremony—The Normal Girls Were Entertained by the Woman's Club—The McIver Family Attended—Splendid Address of Dr. C. A. Smith, of the University of Virginia.

Before an audience of variously estimated thousands, the Charles Duncan McIver statue on the Capitol Square was presented to view yesterday afternoon by the people of the State and viewed the precious gift on the Capitol Square.

It was a ceremony that carried none of the thrills of a contesting convenience or fierce hooker away. The spirit that moved them to give expression to their admiration toward the distinguished and fit-and-proper citizenry. Threats, may have taken hundreds away. But if did not prevent other hundreds from uniting with those who love the patriotism of purpose, and to that spirit the short exercises took form.

The break of day certainly, morning rudely mistrusted the college girls. Their eyes early unclosed to the dresses and prepared to look their best while. Rain fell heavily in Greensboro. They chanced their dresses and prepared to look their best while. Rain fell heavily in Greensboro. They changed
