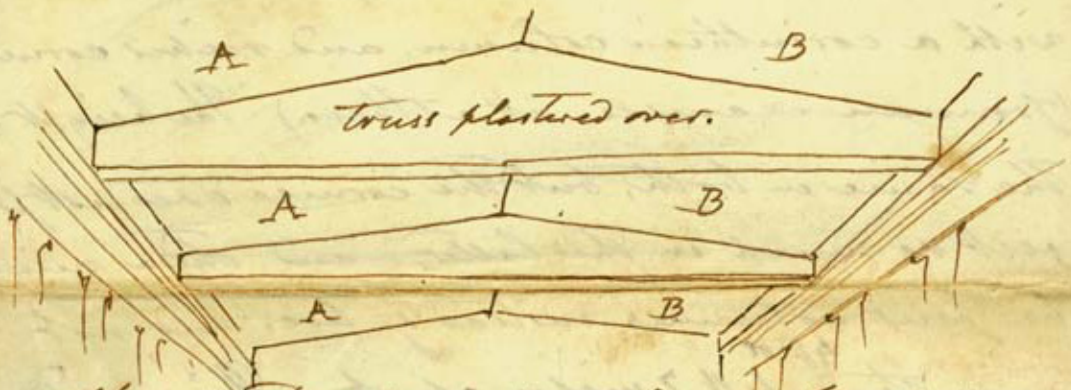
The ceiling I make nearly flat, shewing the principal trusses of roof running across furred to and plastered, the part between is in two inclined planes thus: A. B.



this is the cheapest mode of breaking up the flat surface of ceiling, and would be more in pure Greek style than the arch. I think we must give up the arch on account of expense, and want of height in side walls. And so of the sky light... which will not be wanted either for light or ventilation.

Gov. Swain

Yours respectfully & truly
A. J. Davis

© Copyright 2006 by the University Library, The University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, all rights reserved.
Documenting the American South (http://docsouth.unc.edu/index.html)